Vegetarian and Vegan Pet Food

Pets are a part of the family and while providing single source of nutrition for many pets, We are committed to supporting the health of all cats and dogs. Shoppers have an array of options when selecting food for their pet, such as wet, fresh or dry, that provides the complete and balanced nutrition and the many essential nutrients for healthy dogs, cats, small mammals, birds, aquariums and terrariums at their specific life stage. It is possible for vegetarian or vegan dog food recipes to provide complete and balanced nutrition for healthy adult dogs (often termed "adult maintenance") without the use of animal-derived ingredients.

However, some dogs, cats, small mammals, birds, aquariums and terrariums have unique nutritional needs based on their different life stages, such as gestating and lactating adults or growing puppies and kittens. In addition, some animals may be undernourished, malnourished or have a nutrition-related disease or illness. These populations require pet food formulated for their conditions. A recipe without animal-derived ingredients may not provide sufficient levels of critical nutrients required to support the pet's health. Shoppers can look to the Nutritional Adequacy Statement and appropriate life stage before choosing the best food for their pet and family's lifestyle, and work with their veterinarian to ensure he or she remains healthy and receives the proper nutrition.

As obligate carnivores, cats need the amino acids, vitamins and long-chain fatty acids found in animal-derived ingredients, such as muscle, organ meat and fat, to survive. A complete and balanced vegan cat food recipe will be supplemented with synthetically-produced essential nutrients.
